I have been busy doing all kinds of things leading up to Christmas, but I am finally back to working on the J-3 Cub again. at least for the moment. This afternoon I had time to cover the right side of the fuselage and shrink the tissue with an alcohol mist, which is shown below. I got the entire side covered with a single piece of yellow tissue. :O) There were a few puckers, but as you can see, I managed to work most of them out. I am a little concerned about the covering pulling in the soft lower longerons when I start doping. However, I can not do anything about now.

Merry Christmas.....Tandy
